

Alice in Wonderland joins the A Moment in Time collection
Produced in a Limited Edition of 250, Ninth in the Series

The classic fantasy tale of Disney's Alice in Wonderland has entranced generations of Disney fans, and is celebrating its sixty-fifth anniversary in July 2016. One of its most captivating scenes has inspired a new tableau for the prestigious Border Fine Arts' A Moment in Time collection, which showcases the exceptional skills of British artists.

Renowned UK sculptor, Peter Mook, worked with Border Fine Arts' design team to create this outstanding study, capturing the magic of the moment in the 1951 movie classic when Alice discovers the Mad Hatter and March Hare, along with the drowsy Dormouse, celebrating their 'Un-birthdays' — and when Alice sits down the manic duo rush to tell her 'it's very, very rude to sit down without being invited'.

Peter has captured all the detail and comic charm of the Mad Hatter's tea party with his usual incomparable artistry. Every Alice in Wonderland, is handmade and intricately hand-painted by the extremely gifted artists working in the Border Fine Arts studios in Langholm, Scotland.
