

New to the stables of The Trail of Painted Ponies

The Trail of Painted Ponies grows in popularity year on year and the two launches for January 2014 are destined to add to the success of the brand. The two new stable mates have a distinct Native American flavour, but in two very different styles, conveying messages of harmony and loyalty.

A fabulous study of movement, Painted Harmony features a mare and her foal running alongside. Known for its distinctive markings, the American Paint Horse is a colourful, naturally intelligent and versatile Western breed. Characterised by a broad chest, well-muscled hindquarters and refined head, Paint Horses come in a variety of coat patterns.

Vibrant beyond words, The Guardian represents the special bond between horse and rider in Native American culture. If an Indian wishes to gain something, he promises his horse that if it helps him he will paint it with native dyes, so that all may see that help and protection have come to him through the aid of his horse.
